Right-wing extremists are putting women's health at risk
to promote their extreme ideology.
Queens families deserve better.

“In Congress,
I’ll defend lifesaving
health care
for women
and children
— just like I have in the State Assembly.”

— GRACE MENG

Grace with her husband Wayne, and their two sons, Tyler and Brandon.

Grace Meng knows that protecting women’s healthcare programs isn’t just vital for women – it’s crucial for families too. As a fierce advocate for women and families, Grace fought in the State Assembly to:

- require health insurance policies to cover baby formula for sick babies,
- allow employees to inquire about unequal pay without fear of getting fired,
- help working parents attend their child’s school-related functions during business hours.

In Congress, Grace Meng will stand up to right-wing extremists to protect women’s access to health care — from lifesaving preventative screenings to mammograms and contraception.

“Grace has been a staunch advocate for Queens families for years, fighting for important health insurance policies to protect women and children. That’s why I’m supporting her to defend us in Congress.”

— CLAIRE SHULMAN, FORMER QUEENS BOROUGH PRESIDENT
